

Date: 29 November 2019

STATEMENT

London Bridge attack on 29 November 2019

Following the announcement by the Met Police that a terror incident took place at London Bridge today, Friday 29 November 2019, the London Emergencies Trust (LET) has reactivated.

Gerald Oppenheim, chair of trustees, says:

“Our thoughts are with those who have been caught up in this terrible incident. We expect to distribute charitable gifts to the injured and the bereaved next of kin from the UK Solidarity Fund, which was set up by the British Red Cross to help support anyone affected by terror attacks in the UK.

“As soon as we have more information about the incident and those affected, we will provide an update on our plans”.

ENDS

(109 words)

Notes to editors:

The London Emergencies Trust (LET) is a registered charity and came into being after the terrorist attack on Westminster Bridge in March 2017:

<https://londonemergenciestrust.org.uk/>

The London Emergencies Trust (LET) scaled back its activities from September 2018, having made grants totalling more than £11m to those affected by the Grenfell Tower fire and the four 2017 terror attacks in London.